

North Menan Butte Trails National Natural Landmark

The Menan Buttes are two of the world's largest tuff cones—volcanoes formed when basaltic magma boils up through ground water. The trail to the summit of the North Butte offers wonderful opportunities to explore the unique geology and natural history of this area. North Menan Butte is designated as a National Natural Landmark and a Research Natural Area by Congress. These designations help preserve the Butte so people can enjoy and study this unique geologic area in its healthy, natural condition. - BLM
